

Celtic Audio Links Up With TSL

Professional products group TSL has announced it has signed an exclusive partnership agreement with Celtic Audio Ltd.

Under the terms of the agreement, Celtic Audio will design highly accurate professional audio monitoring technology, which will be specified in conjunction with TSL's team of broadcast industry experts.

Products will carry the TSL name and be marketed through TSL's worldwide reseller network.

Celtic Audio specialises in the development of professional audio products with extremely accurate reproduction of sound. Such accuracy is essential in a professional environment where any fault or error must be detected in order to ensure the highest quality final output.

Members of Celtic Audio's design team include highly respected industry experts David Lambert, John Watkinson and David Lyon.

TSL Professional Products Group General Manager Chris Exelby said: "We are delighted to have formalised our working relationship with such highly respected and world-renowned audio experts.

"This agreement will benefit broadcast system operators worldwide who are crying out for the sonic quality and unmatched multi-channel monitoring capabilities which will be offered by our combined resources."

Celtic Audio Managing Director David Lambert, commented: "We have been working with TSL for some time on a variety of audio technology projects and have been impressed with what they have achieved with their professional audio range.

"The move to confirm our cooperation is very exciting as it gives us a direct access to TSL's system experts who will help us to correctly specify new highly accurate audio monitoring products for the broadcast market."