

TSL senior sales appointment

TSL has announced the appointment of Ian Collinson as systems sales manager with responsibility for developing systems integration business opportunities and managing key customer accounts.

Collinson has a proven track record in business development, account management and project management and was recently based in South Africa with Sony developing opportunities for the World Cup. He is experienced in working with a broad range of broadcast and IP based technologies and brings a wealth of experience to compliment TSL's key strengths.

TSL managing director, David Phillips, said: "Ian brings to TSL a strong engineering and account management background. With a broad experience in many project areas, his skill set strengthens our ability to pursue a wide range of business opportunities both in the UK and internationally."